Publications

A Call for Educational Change Leadership

Provides a new definition of leadership, discusses the responsibilities of leadership, and offers some guidelines and suggestions.

Building Bridges: Family Mathematics Education and Support

Discusses a model that extends Family Math activities by providing emotional support to parents. The methods help parents understand the changes in mathematics education and help them support their children's learning.

Building Supportive Classroom Communities

Contains two articles by teachers on the effects of using dyads in their classrooms.

Constructivist Listening in the Classroom

This easy-to-read booklet contains practical, teacher-tested strategies for using the support structures of constructivist listening with students. Topics include the role of emotional release, getting started using dyads, and ideas for reinforcing the guidelines.

Getting at the Roots of the Achievement Gap: Creating Healing Communities to Eliminate Racism

This booklet describes how racism affects student achievement, why it has been so persistent in, and what schools can do to help students who have been the target of racism and promote student achievement. This booklet is available in Spanish as Llegar a las Raíces de la Brecha en el Nivel de Logro Académico: La Creación de Comunidades Curativas Para Eliminar el Racismo.

If Not Now, When? If Not Us, Who: Raising Equity Issues in Educational Settings

A set of 18 short episodes that can be used to address equity issues.

Many Waters

Newsletter that reports on equity in mathematics education.

Promoting Equity in Mathematics Education: Support for Teachers

A report on some of the effects on teachers of the Improving Mathematics Education in Diverse Classrooms project. This was our first equity project.

Reflections on Educational Change Support Groups

A report from two teachers who have led support groups at their schools, a discussion of the difference between support groups and psychotherapy, and guidelines for leading support groups.

Ripples of Hope: Building Relationships for Educational Change

A book explaining the principles and practices underlying an approach to educational change that focuses on reflection, relationship building, and healing from emotional hurts that impede our effectiveness as educators.

Take It Up: Leading for Educational Equity

A manual of 52 practical activities that puts the theory in Ripples of Hope into practice.

The Social and Psychological Dimensions of Educational Change

Provides a theoretical background as well as practical methods for promoting the personal and social transformations necessary to sustain educational reform.

Uncovering Bias in the Classroom: A Personal Journey

A teacher reflects on discovering how her biases affected her classroom and what she did about it.

Understanding and Ending the Oppression of Jews: What You Can Do

This booklet will increase your understanding of Jewish history, how anti-Jewish oppression (often referred to as anti-Semitism) operates, and what you can do about it.
